

[illegible]

The first common method for estimating the probability of a given outcome is the maximum likelihood method. This method involves finding the parameter values that maximize the likelihood of the observed data. The likelihood function is defined as the product of the probabilities of the observed outcomes, given the parameter values. The maximum likelihood estimates are the parameter values that maximize this function.

